Fifty-sixth session
First Committee

Letter dated 19 October 2001 from the Permanent Representative of South Africa to the United Nations addressed to the Chairman of the First Committee

The South African delegation, during the general debate of the First Committee, delivered a statement on behalf of the partner countries (Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Mexico, New Zealand, South Africa and Sweden) of the New Agenda Initiative regarding the Ministerial Communiqué issued by the seven foreign ministers on 8 October 2001. As you will recall, my delegation requested that the Ministerial Communiqué be circulated as an official document of the First Committee of the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session.

It would therefore be appreciated if the present letter and its annex could be circulated as an official document of the First Committee.

Annex to the letter dated 19 October 2001 from the Permanent Representative of South Africa to the United Nations addressed to the Chairman of the First Committee

Ministerial Communiqué issued by the Foreign Ministers of Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Mexico, New Zealand, South Africa and Sweden

The Foreign Ministers of Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Mexico, New Zealand, South Africa and Sweden have, in their preparation for the fifty-sixth session of the United Nations General Assembly, evaluated progress on nuclear disarmament and considered further measures to be taken in pursuit of their joint initiative to achieve a nuclear-weapon-free world.

They recalled the substantial outcome of the 2000 Review Conference of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT). They noted with satisfaction the level of support given to the New Agenda resolution adopted by the General Assembly on 20 November 2000. They also recalled the constructive dialogue with the nuclear-weapon States that was started at the 2000 NPT Review Conference and agreed to continue this dialogue with a view to accelerating negotiations on all fronts, leading to nuclear disarmament.

The New Agenda Ministers were determined to pursue the complete implementation of the agreements reached at the 2000 NPT Review Conference. That outcome provides the requisite blueprint to achieve nuclear disarmament. Further progress on disarmament must be a major determinant in achieving and in sustaining international stability.

The Ministers made it clear that they remain deeply concerned at the continuing possibility that nuclear weapons could be used. They welcomed the indications of further cuts by the United States and Russian Federation to their nuclear arsenals. They noted that, despite past achievements in bilateral and unilateral reductions, the total number of nuclear weapons deployed and stockpiled still amounts to tens of thousands.

The Ministers also expressed their concern that the commitment to diminish the role of nuclear weapons in security policies and defence doctrines had not so far been pursued. This lack of progress is inconsistent with the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States to achieve the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals. And, in the context of disarmament it clearly represents a failure to grasp the opportunities of the post-cold war security environment.

The Ministers reaffirmed that any presumption of the indefinite possession of nuclear weapons by the nuclear-weapon States would be incompatible with the integrity and sustainability of the nuclear non-proliferation regime and with the broader goal of the maintenance of international peace and security.

The seven Ministers looked forward to the resumption in 2002 of the NPT review process where States would need to account for progress in achieving nuclear disarmament. Accountability will be assessed in the context of the reports that States parties have agreed to submit. To date, there have been few advances in the implementation of the thirteen "steps" agreed to at the 2000 NPT Review Conference. A particular disappointment was the continuing failure of the Conference on Disarmament to deal with nuclear disarmament and to resume negotiations on fissile material. The expectations of progress that had come in 2000 have not yet been met.

The Ministers expressed concern at challenges to the non-proliferation regime. They urged the international community to redouble its efforts to achieve universal adherence to the NPT and not to take any steps that would undermine the determination of the international community to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons. They repeated their call on those three States¹, which are not parties to the NPT and which operate unsafeguarded nuclear facilities, to accede to the Treaty as non-nuclear weapon States and to place their facilities under comprehensive International Atomic Energy Agency agreements.

Ministers stressed that the participation of the international community as a whole is central to the maintenance and enhancement of international peace and stability. International security is a collective concern requiring collective engagement. They emphasised that unilateral and bilateral nuclear disarmament measures complement the treaty-based multilateral approach towards nuclear disarmament. They underlined also that internationally negotiated treaties in the field of disarmament have made a fundamental contribution to international peace and security. The importance of early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty remained crucial in this context.

Ministers emphasised the imperative of irreversibility in arms control. They expressed the view that international treaties in the field of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation must be respected and that all obligations flowing from those treaties must be duly fulfilled.

Ministers stressed the importance of the Treaty on the Limitation of Anti-Ballistic Missiles (ABM) in the promotion and maintenance of international stability and as a basis for further reductions of strategic offensive weapons. Abrogation of the ABM Treaty could hold grave consequences for the future of global security. Further reductions of nuclear arsenals to lower limits must not be put at risk. They called upon all States to refrain from any action that could lead to a new nuclear arms race or that could impact negatively on nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation.

The Ministers reaffirmed their determination to pursue the New Agenda initiative with continued vigour. They agreed that the priority would be to pursue their initiative in the context of the forthcoming NPT review process beginning in 2002. The 2000 NPT undertakings on nuclear disarmament had been given. Implementation of them was now the imperative.

Agenda items 74 (r) and 82

General and complete disarmament: nuclear disarmament

Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty

Note verbale dated 24 October 2001 from the Permanent Mission of Kazakhstan to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General

The Permanent Mission of the Republic of Kazakhstan to the United Nations presents its compliments to the Secretary-General and has the honour to transmit herewith the appeal of the Parliament of the Republic of Kazakhstan to Parliaments and Governments all over the world to take real steps aimed at eliminating nuclear weapons, which was adopted on 24 September 2001 (see annex).

The Permanent Mission of the Republic of Kazakhstan to the United Nations requests that the present letter be circulated as a document of the fifty-sixth session of the General Assembly, under items 74 (r), "Nuclear disarmament", and 82, "Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty".

An Appeal to Parliaments and Governments of the Countries of the World

The twentieth century was marked by the advent of the nuclear era, which not only gave to the entire world the hope of having an inexhaustible source of energy for peaceful purposes, but also gave rise to the nuclear-arms race, which threatens the existence of mankind itself. Ten years ago, thanks to the political will of the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan, N. A. Nazarbayev, with the support of the people of Kazakhstan, the Semipalatinsk nuclear-testing site, which caused irreparable harm to the country's population and environment and became a symbol of the disasters that nuclear weapons bear within themselves, was closed down.

The closing of the testing site was the first step that made mankind believe in building a nuclear-free, stable and safe world and in the possibility of protecting it from the threat of a global catastrophe.

Having given up its military nuclear potential, Kazakhstan strictly adheres to its obligations under the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons. The fact that the Treaty is the sole multilateral agreement in the field of nuclear weapons control which obliges States parties to undertake nuclear-disarmament measures is in our view most important. All questions in the field of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation require the joint efforts of both the nuclear as well as the non-nuclear States, particularly in view of the growing interest of international terrorist organizations in nuclear weapons.

Kazakhstan views the speedy entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty as an important priority in the field of disarmament. Its implementation will give further impetus to the nuclear-disarmament process, by promoting the subsequent complete destruction of nuclear weapons.

Kazakhstan attaches great importance to the maintenance of peace and security in Central Asia and is interested in taking further steps towards carrying out the initiative of establishing a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia.

We are convinced that such a zone in Central Asia will be an important step towards strengthening the non-proliferation regime for weapons of mass destruction and international peace and security.

We profoundly believe that the security of the peoples of the world depends on the political will and desire of all countries to rid the world of nuclear weapons. Kazakhstan's position on the question of the complete elimination of the nuclear threat in the twenty-first century was clearly defined by the President of the Republic at the international conference dedicated to the tenth anniversary of the closing of the Semipalatinsk testing site.

We call upon the Parliaments and Governments of the countries of the world to demonstrate, following the example of Kazakhstan, their responsibility for the fate of mankind and to make a real contribution to the cause of nuclear disarmament.

We consider that the Parliaments and Governments of the countries of the world community must take the necessary steps to ensure the complete destruction of nuclear weapons throughout the world.
